DELEGATE KUHIO IS COMING BACK TO STUMP OAHU

Delegate Kuhio, candidate for re-election, will return to Honolulu tomorrow morning on the Mauna Kea and after a rest of a couple of days will start stumping Oahu.

His first scheduled meeting this week is on Wednesday night, at which time he will speak at the Mofill schoolhouse. On Thursday night he speaks at Moalauea road, Kalihi, and on Friday night at the Kumalae block, Kakaako. All of the meetings will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

John H. Wise, manager of Kuhio's campaign, said this morning that very encouraging news has been received from the prince's campaign on Hawaii. At Keauhou, during the ceremonies connected with the installation of the Kamehameha III memorial tablet, the prince found opportunity to make some speeches and a crowd of about 800 is said to have heard him.

Rev. Stephen L. Desha, who has been travelling with Kuhio and speaking in his behalf, will not come to Honolulu with him, according to report today. Manager Wise says this is because Desha is not in the best of health.

Several objections have been raised to Desha's speeches on the ground that he is attempting to create prejudice and to "raise the color line."

THROW AWAY YOUR EYE-GLASSES!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Optona. Fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in 1 Optona tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.—Advertisement.

HORRORS! TULARE [CAL.] MEDICO USED WRONG HEAT

At last a nature faker has been discovered from Tulare. And would you believe it—he is our most respected citizen, Dr. T. D. Blodgett, who is now spending his vacation at Honolulu, says the Tulare (Cal.) Register. Dr. Blodgett has been fit to send numerous cards to his friends here, and one of them has been the cause of his discovery. The card announced that the writer was in a most tropical climate and was at the time of writing on his way to the volcano. He stated that when he reached the volcano he would scorch the card and then send it. Sure enough, the card was scorched. However, C. L. Russell, the recipient, was a little suspicious of that scorch. A close examination has been made and the conviction settles down upon the examiners that the scorch was inflicted by a plain, ordinary, every-day American made match. What would be the use of going to Honolulu to scorch a postal card at a volcano's crater, any way? We have a perfectly respectable volcano here in California, and furthermore, matches are not very expensive here, either.

'THE WHITE HOUSE' AND HOW IT WAS NAMED 100 YEARS AGO TODAY

[Associated Press]

One hundred years ago today the "president's palace" at Washington was gutted by fire, and from this event it became universally known as the "White House." It was at the time of the war of 1812. In the flickering light of burning Washington, the scarlet-coated figures of the incendiaries, the soldiers of the British King, were to be seen rioting in the streets of the city they had captured after President Madison and his cabinet and most of the citizens had fled at their approach. In the general flight, Dolly Madison, the president's wife, lingered long enough to cut George Washington's portrait from its frame and carry it off to safety. It is related that the president's dinner was still steaming on the table when the British burst into the "palace," as it was then called. In the light cast by the burning Capitol, the Treasury building, the Arsenal and 1000 volumes contained in the Congressional library, the troops rushed to the "palace." Some seized flaming brands from a burning saloon and thrust them into the draperies of the president's house. Mirrors, furniture and bric-a-brac were smashed, while the flames burned until they had gutted the interior and scorched the exterior. When the "palace" was repaired, the fire-marks were obliterated on the outside with white paint. This, it is said, is the way in which the building became known as the "White House."

Today the White House is visited by more than 1000 persons every day. More historical events have centered around this shingling, white mansion than around any like building in the world during the past century. Twenty-eight presidents and their families have lived in it, and two have died within its walls. Lincoln went from its Red Room to his assassination at Ford theater; Garfield was carried unconscious to its shelter where he lingered in pain from the assassin's bullet many weeks before he died. The greatest statesmen of the world have assembled here to discuss the destinies of governments and nations. Its magnificent ball-room has been the scene of functions whose splendor has rivaled those of the most sumptuous of Oriental courts. Here the chief executive conducts his business. To maintain the White House and its expenses it requires over $250,000 a year. Under the head of household expenses, horses and vehicles, etc., is the item, $35,000; fuel, $6,000; lighting, $8,600. Today the White House has been enlarged to accommodate the growing official family of the presidents. It has been reported that since its foundation the American people have spent more than $3,000,000 to keep it in proper order for their "first citizen."

Its London correspondent which ended "moratorium expected."

The message was not in code, but the word "moratorium," quite stumped the cable clerk. He finally consulted the code book and discovered that moratorium was the symbol for "We draw on you for $7000." Unfortunately, this interpretation did not fit in with the sense of the message. The office manager was called in. He couldn't help. The partners in their turn failed to shed any light on the matter.

The cable company was persuaded to repeat the message came back with that curious word unchanged. The mystery remained unsolved until somebody happened to notice a piece on the news ticker that a general mororatorium had been declared in England.

The Standard Dictionary gives: "Moratorium—An emergency act of legislation authorizing a government bank to suspend specie payments for a given period."
